Welcome to the special December/January double issue of the Diseworth Dialogue.

Firstly, I would like to take this opportunity to thank you once again for your kind donations. We now have a final figure which is a fantastic £933. THANK YOU.

What a bumper issue we have in store for you! In no other magazine could you read about swimming with sharks on one page and promising young boxers on another! Thank you to all who have contributed towards this month's magazine.

Our centre pages are, as usual at this time of year, dedicated to a review of the year, with an emphasis on the recent beautiful weddings that took place in the village.

Other articles include a fascinating item written by Muriel Howe about a holiday spent at Dent railway station and Liz Jarrom's account of a balloon flight which to me sounds positively terrifying, but then I won't even go on the baby rides at Drayton Manor! As for Sue's article about swimming with sharks, all I can say is, she's a very brave lady!

Now, I would like to personally thank Anna Groves for all her hard work, which this month was finally rewarded by the completion of the village hall car park and playground. It seems quite ironic that there is no playgroup to enjoy the fruits of Anna's labour. (Perhaps with all the new babies in the village, now would be just the right time to reinstall the village Mother and Toddler group.) You would think that Anna might now take a break from all her fundraising, put her feet up, but no, on pages 18/19 you will find details of the annual Boxing Day Fun Run and New Year's Eve Party both of which Anna has personally organised. All I can say is 'Anna you're a Star!' And I'm not the only one who thinks so, as you'll read in the magazine.

I'm looking forward to the production of Dick Whittington on the 17th of January and I think the offer of accompanied children going free is very generous.

Before that, is of course, the Retired Residents' Christmas Lunch on the 11th of December and a Christmas Concert at St Michael's on the 17th of December.

So all in all, plenty of things to get us into the Christmas spirit. And I think this year we all need a bit of festive cheer!

It just remains for me to wish all Diseworth residents a very Happy Christmas and a Peaceful New Year.

Peggy Under.

Dear Friends

I wonder if you have been caught up in the euphoric celebrations as America elects its first black President. This monumental event in the history of the Black Civil Rights movement; captured so poignantly by Jesse Jackson's tears at the news; looks set to really change the world. For far too long, people have been subjugated or ignored due to race, colour or sex. Now with a white female as a strong contender for so long, and with a black man as the ultimate winner, the marginalised can begin to take hope that it really is possible rather than just empty dreams.

Or can they? Certainly those listed above – those who are marginalised because of race, sex or creed can, but what about the poor? Obama's campaign spent $573m, which in pounds Sterling amounts to £361 million at the current exchange rate. McCain spent $296m. Ignoring the gulf between the amounts spent, it is clear to see that when running for president, money talks. This is not to say that Obama isn't the right person for the job – time will answer that. The point is that there is a fundamental problem here when only the rich – or the richest sponsors – can survive in such a race.

In the current financial climate, the fear that only the rich survive is a very real one. Those who were wooed by unscrupulous money lenders into getting into bad debt are, this Christmas, no doubt rueing the day they saw the advert. However this could also be an opportunity for us as Christians to give hope to those so marginalised.

COUNTRY MATTERS

TWO TRIBES AND A MAGPIE

Our ten brown Isis hens have served us well since last January, but we decided in the autumn that we needed to add to the flock to supply our needs through the winter. During the long summer days, a hen will lay close to one egg per day. As the day length shortens, egg production naturally declines and may even stop in the depths of winter. Poultry, in common with wild birds, tend to go into a moult during autumn. So while the days were still warm in August, we decided to fetch another dozen young birds before our resident hens decided to moult.

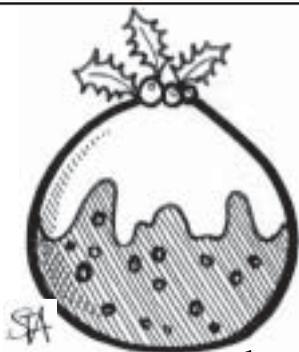

Rather than have some more Isis, a bird bred for battery production, we decided to have some Black Rock pullets instead. These birds are also a hybrid, but they are bigger and stronger, with predominantly glossy black feathers and then a striking chestnut neck and dark red comb. We had difficulty in finding some but eventually located a farm with a dozen growers at the right price. When we got them home we discovered that we had thirteen birds and one of them was what is known as a magpie, her ruff white rather than chestnut.

The new birds were released into the henhouse to join our resident hens and left to get to know each other. The new birds looked like gangly teenagers, and the resident birds eyed them with contempt. At first all was well; the young birds avoided the old birds, not even attempting to get up on the perches at night but huddling in a heap on the floor. Then the trouble started. The new birds grew and started to fight with the established flock battling to get themselves up the pecking order. There was a lot of scuffling and pecking in the pen, especially around the food hopper, but it was worse at night. The new birds proceeded to try and roost on the highest perches already occupied by the old birds. Fierce pecking and squawking occurred until it was finally dark and then all was quiet. After a week or two peace returned to the flock as a new pecking order was established. The only one that seemed a bit out of it was the magpie hen. She wasn't growing as fast as the others and being smaller, she seemed to get picked on by everyone. To get away from the others, she took to flying up and landing on top of the fence. Tottering along like an inexperienced tightrope walker, she seemed so smug as she surveyed the other hens far below her. Even now, despite the fact that she appears to have established herself within the pecking order, she still flies up and has a wander along the fence.

Perhaps being up in the air makes her feel important, my only worry is that she flies down the wrong side and lands outside the pen. I don't want the fox to end up having her as his Christmas dinner!

Village Hall News

Diseworth Village Hall Resurfacing Project is now COMPLETED

As a Diseworth resident you will no doubt recall over the last number of years, Anna Groves and the Playgroup members started fund raising for the resurfacing of the village hall car park. With various fund raising ideas, the blue bags (clothes), inter village rounder competitions (just when you thought you were going to have a relaxing summer) Christmas Fairs. The list is endless.

With Anna at the helm, driving the resurfacing project forward for our village, this has subsequently resulted in the donation of £10,000. This sum of money has been the major contributory factor enabling the resurfacing of the car park to be able to be completed.

The Diseworth Village Hall Committee would personally like to say a

“BIG THANK YOU”
To ANNA GROVES

Not forgetting the other members of the Playgroup who gave their support and all of Diseworth residents for all the support they ultimately have also given over the years in attending and contributing towards the fund raising events!!!!!!

If you have not found time to see the results or perhaps are unaware that this major task has been completed and what, as villagers, we can achieve in supporting our village events, please try to find time. We are sure you will be pleasantly amazed

Finally a further thank you to Mervyn Johnson for all the support and time he gave to ensure the project was completed to the standard required and agreed with the contractors. Mervyn's civil engineering knowledge & expertise in this field, greatly assisted the project completion and ensured that the work was carried out to the agreed standard.

*Vanessa Johnson
Secretary Diseworth Village Hall*

..... and a personal thank you from Dave Adcock

I should imagine by now that everyone will have noticed the refurbished car park at the village hall. Not only have we had the car park re-surfaced but the committee took it onboard to undertake other work at the same time, more especially removing the old oil tank wall, providing steps to the side fire door and generally making good at the rear of the committee room.

The total cost of all this was just in excess of £10,000, an amount that put little or no financial requirement on the hall's finances. The reason for this was thanks to Anna Groves and her concerted effort to ensure her goal was achieved in providing a newly surfaced area at the rear of the hall.

Over the last year or two Anna has organised many events and given up so much of her time. For this the Village Hall Committee would like to take this opportunity to thank her for her effort as I am sure do many of the village residents. Further more we should like to thank all those who have helped Anna organise these fund raising events over this time and to all those generous residents and friends of the village who have supported the various events.

A special thank you should also go to Mervyn Johnson who gave up so much of his time and expertise to oversee the project once the finances were in place, thus allowing the project to be completed swiftly and accurately.

Finally, just to say well done and thank you to everyone who helped or supported the recent firework display at the hall. The evening proved to be very successful in every way and unusually even showed a small profit towards the hall funds.

Claire & Piers Wedding

25th October 2008

When our daughter announced that they had brought their wedding forward, & the new date is in seven weeks, our initial reaction was “not a chance”. & when she adds, “by the way Mum & Dad can you sort the reception out at the pub”, of course we answer ‘not a problem, darling’.

The week leading up to the wedding, saw lots of busy people. Claire’s Auntie Caron was plotting all sorts of surprises & baking ready for the day. Pier’s Auntie Gina, also baking quiches & lots of low calorie puddings (ha ha) with her newly installed oven. Jeff Cooke, Dave Allen & crew erecting the marquee in lovely weather conditions assisted by Mark Mitchell, Del & hindered by Rocky the Dog, (Sorry Jeff for the paw prints). Sarah Minton preparing Claire & the Bridesmaids’ bouquets, button holes & wonderful flower displays. Julie Haywood locked in the kitchen baking sausage rolls & lots of scrumptious goodies for the wedding feast.

The wedding service was so beautiful, Claire looked stunning & Piers look okay for a bloke. They either had a lot of wind or were very happy as they smiled all day.

We all headed back to the pub, Claire & Piers were being driven by our family friend Mark, & the Bridesmaids were being chauffeured in Chris Draycott’s nicely polished white Porsche (At last Chris got it right, just pulling your leg when I call it a Jaguar), thanks for doing this Chris even with the threat of rain.

We had such a warm welcome from Jody & Karen. They had worked so hard to transform the place into a Princess’s Paradise. The smell of the food that Julie was preparing smelt wonderful. The flowers & table decorations that Sarah had made were stunning. Not forgetting the favours that Auntie Caron had hastily made the night before.

The informal reception was followed by a mad party in the evening. The marquee rocked to the sounds of “Trez” & Phil’s Disco (apologies to the neighbours for the noise). We had our own resident photographer on hand; Wiggy (Steve) who managed to take some very interesting photographs between drinking us out of Jack Daniels, even though he blamed Piers for this. We had hog roast & more buffet followed by lots of puddings, washed down by Claire & Piers’ special beer & Pig Brook brewed by the North Cotswold Brewery which is Piers’ family brewery spookily enough in the Cotswolds. We partied into the night & were suitably looked after by Jody & his lovely assistants, Ollie & Ed.

Our heart felt thanks go to all that have already been named, Gina, David, Sophie, Sarah & Jonathon, Claire's friend Rebecca, all you people played such a major part in making Claire & Piers' day so special, it would not have happened without you all. A special thanks goes to Tracy for dragging me off to have my hair done & chill me out, well appreciated by my family. Thank you also goes to all those people behind the scenes, family, good friends & customers alike who have not only supported Derek & I, but who are continuing to carry this on now to Claire & Piers.

We thank everybody who attended the day & hope that they enjoyed themselves as much as we did.

A massive kiss & cuddle go to the three special little people who stole the limelight, Piers' nieces, Alice & Tilly; they were beautiful Princesses & Michael the most charming well behaved Prince.

We wish Claire, Piers & Baby Michael lots of happiness for the future & thank them for letting us share in their very special day.

Married in church

The Dialogue bedtime story

Invitation to our Village Friends

Russell and Sally, from Lady Gate, are marrying on the 20th December in Diseworth Church at 11am. Russell is walking down the lane to the Church with his Best Man, Steve, at about 10.30 and Sally is following, accompanied by her son, Oliver, at about 10.45.

If any of their village friends would like to join them, either on the walk to the Church, in the Church for the ceremony, or afterwards for a buffet at the Bull and Swan from around 12.30pm, they would be very happy to see you.

Thanks!

From Charnwood Community Theatre

Charnwood Community Theatre would like to say a big, warm THANK YOU to the organisers of the Annual Diseworth Flower Show for the generous contribution of £150 from money raised at this year's Flower Show.

CCT likes to keep the ticket prices low, and contributions like this enable us to improve the entertainment value of our productions. We recently purchased our own portable stage lighting, and this contribution will help us to build on this with more lights and better sound equipment. Thank you.

We return to Diseworth Village Hall on Saturday 17 January 2009 with our pantomime, DICK WHITTINGTON, written by our very own Sarah Cox and featuring our usual star-studded cast. We are presenting two performances on that day – an afternoon matinee at 2.30pm and an evening performance at 7.30pm. Oh yes we are!!! As a “thank you” to Diseworth, for the MATINEE PERFORMANCE ONLY, we will be offering FREE ADMISSION FOR ALL CHILDREN WHO ARE ACCOMPANIED BY AN ADULT.

You can book tickets by phoning Mike & Julie Doyle on 01332 810785 or email ctheatre@live.co.uk.

Thanks again to the Flower Show organisers, and to the village of Diseworth for adopting us as your very own Drama Group!

Young People's Drama Project

Following two successful Play-in-a-Week projects in 2007 and 2008 Chorus Theatre are looking at running a regular weekly drama group for young people at Diseworth Village Hall.

The project aims to start in January 2009 and run on a trial basis until May 2009. In that time we will devise and rehearse a new play to be performed to family and friends at the end of the project. The project will be open to anyone aged 7 – 13. There will be a charge of £4 per week for each participant. The project will run for 18 weeks making the total for the project £72. This can be paid in full at the beginning of the project or in two instalments of £36 in January and March.

The group is pencilled in to meet on Thursdays between 5pm and 7pm at Diseworth Village Hall. At present we are looking to see how much interest there would be from young people and whether or not the project is viable.

If you would like to express an interest in being involved in this project then please contact Andrew McWilliam on 01509 212991 or via email andrew@chorustheatre.co.uk

Doorstep Clothing Collection Deception in Diseworth

We've noticed an increase in the number of leaflets through or door asking for old clothes. Perhaps you have too? One of the recent ones was from LAIRATEX LTD. Although not illegal, this is NOT a charity collection although the wording on the leaflet may lead you to believe it is. If you're webbed up, you can check it out here:

<http://www.scamtypes.com/clothing-collection-scam.html>

Of course, there are genuine Charity Clothing Collections, but these will supply a bag with a Charity Number which you can check. However, if you just get a leaflet with only a company name and no Registered Charity number, be suspicious.

You may believe your clothes are heading for the Third World or raising money for charity, but they may instead get cleaned, bagged and sold on at a car boot sale so that somebody else can pocket cash from your kind act.

If in doubt, support Anna Groves' regular Blue Bag Collections at the Village Hall or use a charity shop!

Close Encounters of the Shark Kind

Sharks.

I have written about these magnificent creatures before and some of the situations in which we have met. However, the latest holiday in the Red Sea eclipses all those.

Whenever we go abroad to dive we try our luck at spotting sharks. The Red Sea is home to a few such as the thresher, hammerhead, grey reef shark and oceanic white tip. We were diving an area known as The Brothers. These are two islands (just) one measuring 300m – Big Brother - and the other measuring 100m – Little Brother. They are about 100 miles off shore and appear as pinpricks on a map of the area, rising no more than 25m out of the water. Big Brother has a lighthouse on it but this did not stop the British built 'Numidia' from steaming straight into the island at 2:00 a.m. on the morning of July 21st 1901. She was on her maiden voyage to Calcutta from Liverpool. Another wreck is the 'Aida' which was a supply ship that brought goods to the lighthouse keepers. She sank in 1957 during heavy seas when trying to unload cargo to the island. Wreck diving is our passion but creatures of the deep that put in an appearance are always a welcome sight.

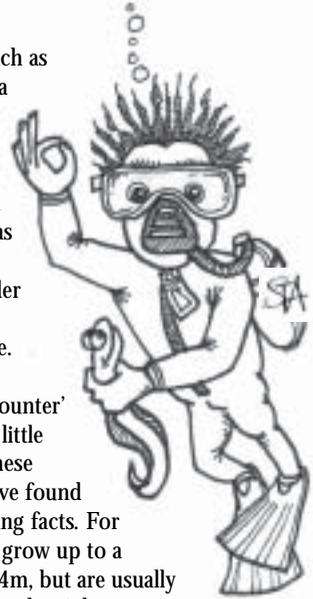

Our first three dives on Big Brother involved diving these two wrecks and on the first dive I spotted a grey reef shark in the distance but it swam away quite quickly. We then moved over to Little Brother and did two dives there. It was at the end of the second dive that I had my 'encounter'.

Just to re-cap – we were living on a 33m boat for the week and some of our entertainment, apart from diving, was to spot sharks circling the boat. The most common one was the Oceanic White Tip (OWT) and the occasional cry of 'shark' would send us scuttling to the side of the boat to observe a 2m shark swimming about 3 – 4 m below the surface.

We would watch as they swam in a very large holding pattern, appearing and disappearing as the circle got wider and wider and then they would be gone.

Since my 'encounter' I have done a little research on these OWTs and have found some interesting facts. For instance, they grow up to a maximum of 4m, but are usually 2m in length, and weigh up to 370lbs. They eat bony fish such as tuna and are usually accompanied by half a dozen pilot fish out for a free meal. They inhabit the open ocean and cruise close to isolated islets. They can reach a depth of 180m. They swim slowly with their pectoral fins spread wide and show little fear. They are a naturally inquisitive shark and will circle divers repeatedly if they think they may have a potential meal. Extreme caution should be shown around this animal. They are unpredictable and bold and have been put on record as the one shark that has attacked more humans than all the other shark species combined. It is advisable to get out of the water as soon as possible if they are in the vicinity!

History books tell us of two very famous shipwrecks – the USS Indianapolis in 1945 and the 'Nova Scotia' in 1942. The Indianapolis sank in the Philippines during WWII and reports of shark attacks accounted for up to 80 deaths. The 'Nova Scotia' was carrying about 1000 passengers when she was torpedoed off the coast of South Africa. Of the total passengers and crew only 192 survived – the majority were attacked by sharks. From survivors descriptions of both these wrecks the attacking sharks were OWTs.

Jacques Cousteau – he of the aqualung fame – said ‘...the white tips are the most dangerous of all sharks...’ I think he’s not kidding. Despite this they are also listed as being a ‘vulnerable species’ as the growing desire for sharks fin soup increases.

On 19th October I had little or no knowledge of all this. Would I have dived if I had known? – probably – but I would have kept my eyes open a bit more!

We were doing a drift dive on Little Brother having been dropped in at the northern end of the island. The group in front of us stayed to watch for hammerheads and were lucky so they spent most of the dive there. Our group of 6 divers drifted slowly with the current admiring the fish and the view and the occasional barracuda until after about 40 minutes the first two divers indicated that they were going to swim back to the boat, which was about 30m away. They left the shelter of the reef and swam out in to the ‘blue’. After a couple of minutes Graham and I decided to do the same and we left my son, Mike, and his buddy, Darren, to have a few more minutes before they came back.

The water was warm, the dive had been good and I was thinking about what was for lunch when I turned to my left to see if I could still see the pair we’d left behind. Shock – horror – sudden gasp. Swimming towards me in a very slow and lazy fashion was a 2 metre OWT. It was about 10 metres away and heading inexorably towards me – no sign of hesitation, its small beady eyes fixed on me. It got closer and I realised it was not going to give way one little bit. They say thoughts can flash through your mind in nanoseconds – it’s true. Do I swim up, down, left or right? Do I try and kick it with my fins (ha-ha)? Does it look hungry (how do you tell?) In the 3 seconds this took the shark was almost upon me. I could have touched it if I wanted to but at the very last possible moment it turned and passed me by on my left. I looked to the reef where number one son and buddy were and they had seen the whole thing and were doubled up with laughter. Apparently I had let out a squeal which they said everyone under water could hear and they had looked up and seen what was going on. Their laughter soon died when they realised they had to swim across the same stretch of water!

Meanwhile I had inhaled a large enough breath of air to ensure that I had no chance of sinking below the level of the shark (that is another thing to do apparently – go below the level of the shark and all will be well. Whoever came up with that piece of advice did not take into account the sharp intake of air which makes you float and the fact that you might have a nearly empty tank at the end of a dive). I turned to Graham and saw the shark had turned back and was swimming about 6 inches over his head towards the first two divers who were blissfully unaware of what was going on and what was following them as they neared the boat.

Trying desperately not to over breathe through fear and panic I motored towards the boat like there was no tomorrow. Forget how hard it is to climb the ladder with all your kit and fins on – I was up there like a piece of greased lightning and landed on the deck in a quivering heap. Seconds later Graham appeared and said, ‘That was a bit close’. Understatement or what. Now I was safe, relief washed over me as we tried to explain to everyone else what had happened.

Number one son and his buddy swam back from the reef and then hung on a line 10m below the boat and watched the OWT as it circled again and again. They felt quite safe protected by a thin bit of line! When I spoke to our dive guide, Susie, she said I would have been ok; it’s just when they start bumping you that you need to get out quick.

I have a great respect for these creatures and realise that we are intruders in their environment. However that one was a bit close for comfort.

The sad demise of the Grimes Gate ash (a very belated report).

Over 200 years of guarding over the Grimes Gate entrance to the village came to an abrupt end when this magnificent tree was chopped, sliced and diced in the space of only six hours on 25th March 2008!! The stump remaining in the hedgerow is the only trace of its existence following a very efficient felling operation.

It is a sad fact that many of the mature ash trees surrounding the village are dying and this particular tree, although far healthier than many others, was in an unfortunate position close to the road and power cables and with a potential for its branches to fall on nearby properties. Severe pruning was probably all that was required but the deed cannot be undone.

25 years ago the entrance to the village down Grimes Gate was very different. There were beautiful elms shading the roadway - but these succumbed to Dutch elm disease - and now the magnificent ash has gone.

We need to be planting more trees around the village for the benefit of our children's children's children. I hope the Parish Council will be looking to plant a replacement for this ash.

Acorns To Oaks . A New Beginning

After 17 years working as a Country Park Ranger for Leicestershire County Council I felt it was time for my career to move on to another level. What? I didn't know until the opportunity to take voluntary redundancy arose. This immediately inspired and motivated me to make a first step (or was it jump) to set up my own business as " Acorns to Oaks" as it is now known.

During my time as a park ranger I undertook varied training that was needed for my day to day responsibilities. These included tree surgery to fishery management, tractor driving to spraying to name a few. My qualifications and experience in managing and maintaining of the woodlands' nature reserves, gardens and fishing lakes have given me a wealth of knowledge to build my company on.

I am now very pleased to offer a friendly and efficient service in all aspects of landscapes, gardens and trees from mowing your lawn to removing the largest of trees, a one off job to regular maintenance or maybe you just want some logs. Give me a call. My advert is in here under " Acorns to Oaks." Free quotes and advice are given with no obligation.

I am passionate about what I do and want that to show in my work. Hence my company motto "service with a smile leaving you with a smile."

Balloon Trip

It all started with a milestone birthday and a desire to go up in a hot air balloon, but the whole thing grew like topsy until there were five of us flying. The day for take off dawned fine with not much wind, so we were very hopeful. At 1.00pm we got the call to say the flight was on, take off at 4.00pm. We arrived at Ambergate just in time to see another balloon set up and take off which gave us an idea what to expect, then our balloon arrived.

We were given instructions on the procedure for take off and landing, and then it was time to inflate the balloon. We all had to give a hand spreading the balloon out on the ground, and then the basket was laid on its side and attached to the prostrate balloon. Two people had to hold open the mouth of the balloon while blowers filled it with cold air. When it was nearly full, 8 of the 12 passengers were instructed to climb into the basket and hang on to the handles tightly while it was still on its side. Then the pilot ignited the propane blowers to heat the air in the balloon, and it floated up gently, pulling the basket upright. The rest of the passengers scrambled over the sides and we were all told to hang on tight until the balloon was airborne. Then suddenly, we were off, gently floating away over the treetops.

We drifted towards a tree clad hill, climbing steadily all the time as the pilot fired up the burners. As we cleared the top of the hill we were treated to a magnificent view of Amber valley as it stretched away in the distance towards Chesterfield. Ever upwards we went, the burners roaring in our ears and keeping our heads warm. We climbed to 2000ft above sea level, and then slowly descended down to about 600ft above the ground. From this height we could see an amazing amount of detail, and conduct a thorough examination of people's gardens and roofs. Lots of the fields were crossed by animal tracks, and we did see the occasional hare scampering along these tracks. Some people waved to us from their gardens, and two young people called to us to enquire if it was fun. We shouted back that it was brilliant. On route we passed over Wingfield Manor and Ogston reservoir, and then all too soon, it was time to land.

The pilot picked his spot, a grass field, and we were told to hang on tight to the handles of the basket, bend our knees and not to let go or get out until he told us it was safe to do so. The descent seemed quite quick and the ground rushed up to meet us and we were down. The basket teetered on its edge as it dragged along the ground briefly, then toppled over on its side. The pilot leaped out and did things to deflate the balloon, then told us it was safe to get out. We all scrambled out, helping each other as it was rather muddy underfoot. The support vehicle arrived, plus all the people who were following us in their own cars. Next job was to pack away the balloon into its bag, stand the basket back up and get out of the field. We had to enlist help from a farmer and his tractor at this stage, as the support vehicle got stuck in the mud.

With the dark closing in we finally made it out onto the road and the champagne was cracked open. Suitably refreshed, we awaited our certificates, only to discover that the pilot had one more treat for us. He informed us that officially we had all broken the law as commoners are not allowed to fly in hot air balloons according to an old law. So he would have to create us all Lords and Ladies. To peals of laughter he made us all kneel on a muddy verge, pretended to singe some of our hair with his lighter, and then sprayed us with champagne! Certificates were handed out, then back in the support vehicle for the journey back to our takeoff point. A quick drink in the pub then homeward bound all of us tired, a bit muddy but exhilarated.

The Diseworth Destroyer

The story started some 4 years ago at the Penarth Amateur Boxing Club in South Wales with a young 14 year old Englishman wanting to become a boxer. The training began. In 2006 Robert Steven, now aged 16, moved up to The Birches and joined the Charnwood Boxing Club, run by John Skillen. Hours of hard training and rounds of sparring took place until Robert's coach suggested he was ready to become an ABA registered fighter; Robert was delighted as this meant he would be fighting for real.

In October Robert went through the process of medicals and registration and waited for the call to fight.

Saturday 11th October 2008 was his first official ABA contest. He travelled down to a hostile Irish working men's club in Corby where he was matched against a local West Indian man with dreadlocks, a boxer aged 28 (very scary). The three 2 minute rounds began with a flurry of punches from Robert that nearly saw the bout stopped. The first round was easily won by the Diseworth Destroyer but in the second round the Corby fighter fought his way back into the reckoning. Both boxers came out in the third determined to secure the win. The longest 2 minutes of Robert's life saw him end on a high with a stunning right uppercut that shook his opponent to the core. The final bell. A nervous few moments while the 3 ring side judges handed in their scores, then the moment of truth, a unanimous decision to the Corby boxer. Massive disappointment, but a great performance. Onwards and upwards.

Undeterred by the defeat, Robert was straight back into training under the watchful eye of his coach John. Then the call comes. Robert has been asked to fill in for a fight at Coventry University as a fighter had withdrawn. The fight was for the following day. No worries says Robert, I am ready. So on Wednesday the 29th October he is in the ring again. His opponent is an Asian student from the university. Again Robert sets off at a great tempo and the student suffers from some stunning blows. The first round ends with Robert well in front. The second round sees the student pull back some points but his punches seem to have no effect on the Destroyer and throughout the third round Robert dominates which results in a unanimous points decision to secure Robert's first official win.

Loughborough town is the next venue for the young boxer but not 2 weeks to prepare, just 10 days. So training is increased and Robert takes to doing his stamina work up and down Long Mere Lane. Fight night Friday the 7th November. 20 Diseworthians and another 10 from as far as Coventry turned up to support The Destroyer. Roberts opponent was slightly shorter but stocky and the fight was underway with a roar from home crowd. A very eagerly contested first round with Robert winning it with some great straight jabs. The opponent again came strong in the second connecting with a couple of good head shots. The third round beckoned with all to fight for and both boxers were aware of what was at stake, so a flurry of early punches saw Robert take the initiative which he held on to. The unanimous point decision was greeted with uncontrollable scenes in the crowd.

Robert was presented his trophy by the bout's sponsors M&M Properties and Lettings. The biggest honour came when it was announced that Robert had won the 'best debut boxer' on the night at the town hall and the trophy was presented by Leicester boxing legend Tony Sibson.

So when you see the lonely figure of Robert running up and down Long Mere Lane encourage The Diseworth Destroyer with some appropriate vocal comment.

Thank you to all those who attended for your support.

Congratulations on a great start in boxing from a very proud family.

LONG WHATTON & DISEWORTH PARISH COUNCIL NEWS

The Chairman welcomed George Pollard to the meeting. George is a correspondent for the Loughborough Echo and the Melbourne Messenger newspapers following the demise of NuNews. He promises to see if he can improve the distribution of the Messenger in the Parish.

The preparation of the coming year's Budget will probably dominate Councillor's thoughts for the next couple of months and arrangements for dealing with this task were made. Most local Councils routinely ensure that almost any information requested by members of the public is made readily available. This Council is no exception and now the new revised version of the legally-required Model Publication Scheme was formally adopted at the meeting. Updated information about this will appear on our website in due course.

Progress towards affordable housing in both villages has taken a step forward, with the options for possible sites being pursued. A consultation exhibition/meeting open to all will take place at Diseworth Village Hall on 9th December from 4-7pm. Another will take place at Long Whatton as soon as possible.

The Council's representation to Long Whatton Community Association was formally considered. This resulted in Councillor Downs joining Councillor Wilkins as the Council's two representatives. Also, enquiries are to be made about arrangements for keeping in touch with the School Governors, either through representation by a member of the Council or at least by keeping in touch.

The Pride Alarm scheme organised by local police is seen as a valuable facility and the Council has responded to funding appeals for some years. It was agreed to continue to help this year.

Quotations for play equipment maintenance had been received and the Budget Working Group will be considering this.

Following last month's public meeting six members of the public had offered to form an action group to deal with the 'Airport Parking' problem. Once arrangements are in place to obtain factual information from the police and the highways authority, the Action Group will begin its work.

The Council has been told that, from a proposed start date of 25th January, the daytime half-hourly Skylink bus service through the villages will be reduced to hourly. The service operated by Kinchbus is responding to requests for a similar service through Kegworth and therefore the buses will alternate the two routes during the daytime. This will mean an hourly service throughout the 24 hours. It was decided to note this information with regret at another reduced facility in the Parish.

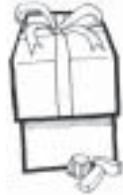

The Natural Burial Company had written seeking further sites to meet the increasing demand for environmentally-friendly burials. It currently operates sites at Prestwold and Scraftoft in the County. If anyone wishes to tell the Company of a suitable site I can provide contact information.

We are considering government consultations about the East Midlands Regional Plan and 'Communities in Control' and have discussed the somewhat ponderous proceedings of the 'Valley Community Forum' whose next meeting is at Packington on 19th November. Planning consultations this time were few and mainly centred upon the developments sought at Donington Park to enable it to become a Grand Prix circuit. Needing more time for the current major application it was decided to defer a response to the Planning Group meeting on 20th November.

Yours truly has been summoned to do his duty on the Jury in November/December. I'll be keeping everything going but sorry in advance for any delays in response to calls. Just leave a message (details elsewhere) and I'll respond asap.

In case I don't get another chance, my best wishes and Season's Greetings to everyone in Long Whatton and Diseworth.

Douglas Maas, Parish Clerk

Seasonal Villains

I think I was getting a bit out of control with the hissing, foot stamping and hand clapping and was even about to verbalise my reaction to the scene I was watching, when the husband started to laugh at me and stopped me from continuing.

“OK”, I tell the husband, “I know I’m not at a pantomime, although I’m acting as though I am, but there are very definitely villains here, ganging up on the good guys and upsetting them, creating havoc, playing to the gallery and causing my eccentric behaviour”.

Actually, the gallery is our garden fence and these particular villains are squirrels that are stealing the bird food, digging holes in the lawn to bury the contraband nuts, only to dig them up again the next day, making a terrible mess of the lawn and seriously affecting my sanity. We are now on bird feeder number 4 (supposedly squirrel proof) and all this activity sends the poor dog into an absolute frenzy when she sees them. Daisy has always been very quiet before, but she now accompanies my stamping and clapping symphony with very well timed barks that surprise both her and the squirrels, but it still fails to deter them, they just exit the stage for a short while.

There are five distinct and quite recognisable, marauding, thieving, squirrel villains.

One always sits on top of the bird table and eats the nuts or other food he has taken from the bird feeder and he holds his tail up and around in front of his stomach, which makes him look like he is wearing a sporran. So this is Jock McSquirrel; sporran wearing, athletic, nimble and very quick to scarp, but never for very long.

The most annoying is Fish-wife squirrel, with unfortunately also some East-ender character in her. She does not just steal the nuts, but has the gall to sit boldly on top of the fence from where she loudly protests, moans, swears, chunters and chatters at the dog and me when we go out to chase her off. Sometimes she sits in the trees on Brookside, cursing and yelling at people as they pass.

Squirrel Vinnie Jones is recognisable by his habit of thundering around the garden aggressively, squaring up to the other squirrels and challenging them to make them give up the food they have in their paws. He chases the other squirrels and the birds and makes them drop the food they are eating, and then he swerves in at great speed and makes off with it.

Cobber Squirrel Digger would have been a convict sent to Australia in years gone by; he has safe cracker skills, but needs no dynamite as he can simply chew through the pegs and bases of the most secure feeders. He is also a very proficient hider of his ill begotten loot. He can dig several tiny holes in seconds and stash away many nuts, and knows days later exactly where they all are.

Finally, there is Lazy Bandit Squirrel, who has dark marks around his eyes (no bandanna or even sombrero, though) and who does not like to use more energy than absolutely necessary to get his food. He prefers to just take it if he can. He sits calmly and quietly on the fence out of the way, watching the other squirrels, particularly Cobber Squirrel Digger, obtaining and storing food. Lazy Bandit Squirrel patiently waits until all the other squirrels have left, finally chased off by Daisy and me. Then he hops around the lawn going to each little food store he has observed and noted and unearths the nuts that have been carefully buried by the other squirrels.

Female offspring arrived the other day when I was in full pantomime type jeer, and she observed something I missed. She noticed that there is Scrounger Pigeon, constantly wandering round and around the garden, picking up the dropped food bits or sidling up to birds and squirrels to ask for a crumb, seed or nut.

While we were in the conservatory looking at Scrounger Pigeon, Lazy Bandit Squirrel scrambled down the fence and across the lawn and started digging up nuts. Female offspring, Daisy dog and I were just about to go out and shoo him away when a huge commotion occurred.

Bandit had been spotted by Fish-wife Squirrel who nattered and chattered and swore obscenities at him. This alerted Cobber Squirrel Digger, who scurried down on to the lawn, obviously in very high dudgeon and incensed that his nuts were being thieved.

Lazy Bandit Squirrel was too slow to get out of the way and a little fight ensued, which looked a bit like boxing kangaroos, in miniature.

Cobber Squirrel Digger was getting the better of this fight and Lazy Bandit was backing off, when Squirrel Vinnie Jones joined the affray, with two smoking barrels, a lot of attitude and sheer aggression.

With the chattering noise of Fish-wife squirrel ringing out from the top of the fence, and watched by sporan wearing Jock McSquirrel from up on the roof, Vinnie chased off both Cobber and Bandit Squirrel, leaving the garden empty and quiet.

I tell female offspring that I've had enough of squirrels being such a nuisance and that it's about time I asked someone to get rid of them for good, trap them and take them away or something.

Clearly what you need to do to stop the squirrels from getting all the birds' food, female offspring advised, is to feed Squirrel Vinnie Jones and train him to keep all the other squirrels away from the bird feeders. He would be your guard, an SS, a 'security squirrel', working for you for nuts.

Really! I don't know where she thinks up these incredible fantasies!

Holiday 2008

Self catering holidays come in all shapes and sizes. Brian and I have holidayed in both very small and very large cottages, log cabins, barn conversions and a wing of a castle, but this year was really different.

Going back to July 22nd 2007 we walked the Ribbleshead Viaduct with The Friends of the Settle and Carlisle Line and with our completion certificate was a tea shirt, other items and a small brochure advertising a 'get away from it all' Dent Station.

Dent Station is now a self catering property. We booked and the wheels were set in motion. On September 5th 2008 we set off, driving through rain all day to our holiday destination for a week at Dent Station. Dent Station is 5 miles from the village of Dent on the old coal road and 1150 feet above sea level. The road actually climbs to 1750 feet over to Garsdale.

On our arrival we found that there were quite a few rules. The station itself is on the main line Leeds to Carlisle route. The building is over 125 years old and a Grade 11 listed building. We felt very privileged to be staying in the building where so many people had travelled through, to and from.

The station has been completely refurbished :

The Entrance Hall.

Formerly the foyer for the Carlisle platform. Now, with its flagstone floor, under floor heating, Victorian radiators, cast iron shoe and boot warmer. All outdoor wear must be removed here.

Lounge.

The former Waiting Room. Now a beautiful lounge with large sofa, heavy curtains, chandelier and a view out of the windows down the valley to Dent. The room has a huge fireplace with its railways lanterns on the mantle shelf and one original waiting seat. The window for the ticket office is still in place.

Kitchen.

Where shall I start! This room was originally the First and Second Class Ladies Waiting Room and is now a living/dining kitchen. Fitted with a flagstone and oak floor, underfloor heating, large sofa, dining table, chairs, coal fired Rayburn, electric cooker, fridge/freezer, washer/drier and more. Again the kitchen window has views down the valley. The views from these windows are just great! In the far corner of the kitchen is a spiral staircase to the top bedroom. This is a twin room with views south over Arten Gill and Dent Head viaduct.

Other Bedrooms

Through the lounge is a narrow room with two adult bunk beds. Formerly the Porter's Office.

Master Bedroom

Formerly the Station Masters Office. Again, a room with a fireplace and very comfortably furnished. As all the windows are on the station side they have frosted glass.

Bathroom

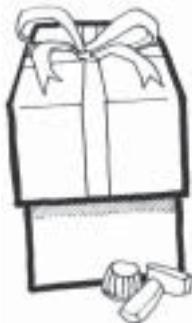

Originally the coal store. A fully equipped bathroom with original Thomas Crapper WC's and wash basin. Again, underfloor heating.

As the property is open all the year round in the yard is a Jeep just in case you are snowed in. Also in the outhouse is a generator in case of power cuts. The water is filtered and fine for washing, but you have to use bottled water for drinking and cooking. We don't know how long it took to refurbish the station but the attention to detail and all the fine points are just too many to mention.

There is so much to do in the area. It's straight out of the front door onto the train – south to Settle and North to Carlisle. Walking at Ribbleshead, visiting the Hawes Museum or the Wensleydale Creamery and eating fish and chips! On our last day down in Dent we visited the newsagent and village shop and on the notice board was an announcement ... LOCAL STATION WINS AWARD. Robin Hughes, who had refurbished Dent Station had won an Award of Merit as a winner of the National Railway heritage Award and RICS Tourism and Leisure Award 2008.

We know the ladies love a hands-on evening. Maggie Cooper arrived with bundles of stripped willow for us to make obelisks, plant supports or similar. She demonstrated the techniques first, placing ten canes in a base with peg holes to support the work, then taking more slender weaving canes proceeded to weave around the circle. A certain amount of strength and wrestling was needed to pull the item into shape and keep everything under control without poking other peoples' eyes out!

Escapism, from the normal daily work routines, you could tell everyone thoroughly enjoyed it. Mainly working in pairs and helping one another, most people produced a well worthwhile plant support or decorative item. Liz Jarrom thanked Maggie, already we have plans for inviting her back to make cane wreaths for Autumn or Christmas next year.

Last minute changes have been made for the December meeting, after three members joined the Loughborough University Choir. We are going to their Christmas Concert at the Cope Auditorium in Loughborough as it falls on our meeting night Monday 8th December. We are taking 16 members on the Donington Community bus, leaving the Village Hall at 6.45pm. With a programme of carols by Benjamin Britten and other choral works, this will be a wonderful start to the Christmas season.

HEALTH PAGE

It's the Festive Season and the Great News is there are Lots of Good Reasons to Eat Chocolate

We are constantly bombarded with negative messages about our favourite indulgences, so it's good to know that chocolate does have health benefits. I must point out that the type of chocolate that gives these health benefits is dark chocolate that has high cocoa content and low sugar content, sweet milk chocolate does not have the same health benefits.

Dark chocolate is good for the heart as it can help to lower high blood pressure and improve circulation due to the naturally occurring antioxidants it contains called flavonoids. These flavonoids help to thin the blood and slow down blood clotting and they also impede the build up of bad cholesterol, while encouraging increased levels of the good cholesterol. Apparently, eating a few squares of dark chocolate each day can reduce the risk of having a heart attack by up to 50%. Another naturally occurring chemical found in chocolate, epicatechin, could help prevent a range of diseases from dementia to strokes.

A study of people who ingested cocoa rich foods and drinks, had improved blood flow to key areas of the brain that enhanced brain function, helping to reduce fatigue and the effects of aging. Another study found that adults with chronic fatigue syndrome who ate 45grms of high cocoa dark chocolate each day reported significantly less fatigue. Research in Italy showed that regular consumption of flavonoids rich dark chocolate, which is naturally low in sugar, increased the body's metabolism of blood sugar which may reduce the risk of diabetes.

Chocolate could be included in cough medicine in the future as a naturally occurring compound in chocolate, theobromine, seemed effective in treating coughs. This same compound is a mild stimulant and a natural anti-depressant and helps to promote a positive mental attitude. It can also improve alertness and attention span.

Eating chocolate also stimulates the release of serotonin, a brain chemical that makes us feel happy and elated similar to feeling in love. Gentlemen please take note. Finally, the calorie question, surely eating chocolate makes us fat? Dark chocolate is actually low in calories and three dark chocolates have a lot less calories than most deserts, and they feel luxurious too, so enjoy.
